III. SITUATION

A. Emergency/Disaster Conditions and Hazards

Island County is vulnerable to the effects of flooding, extreme wind and storm, earthquake damage, and the possible effects of volcanic eruption. These hazards could cause public and private property loss and damage, death and injury, damage to the environment, and prolonged disruption of commercial activity in the county. These and other possible hazards will require maximum efforts by available law enforcement personnel to maintain civil control and property security. While other hazards are possible they are not expected to produce as widespread or prolonged impact on the county.

B. Planning Assumptions

1. General law enforcement problems are compounded by disaster related community disruption, restriction of movement, impacted communications and facilities, and a shortage of law-enforcement resources.
2. The capabilities of local law enforcement agencies will be quickly exceeded. Supplemental assistance shall be requested through local and state emergency management channels and the operation of mutual aid agreements (MAAs).

2. The Sheriff, in addition to having 24-hour operational capability, has two-way radio communication links between its respective mobile units and the county EOC. This becomes a valuable resource during a disaster situation. (See ESF 2 Communications, Information Systems, and Warning for communication frequencies).

3. If an emergency occurs within unincorporated Island County, the Sheriff will exercise overall authority for law enforcement activities and responsibilities.
4. Law enforcement units, with the use of their sirens and public address systems, may be requested to disseminate warning and emergency information.
